Question :

What are the Stages / Steps in data processing?

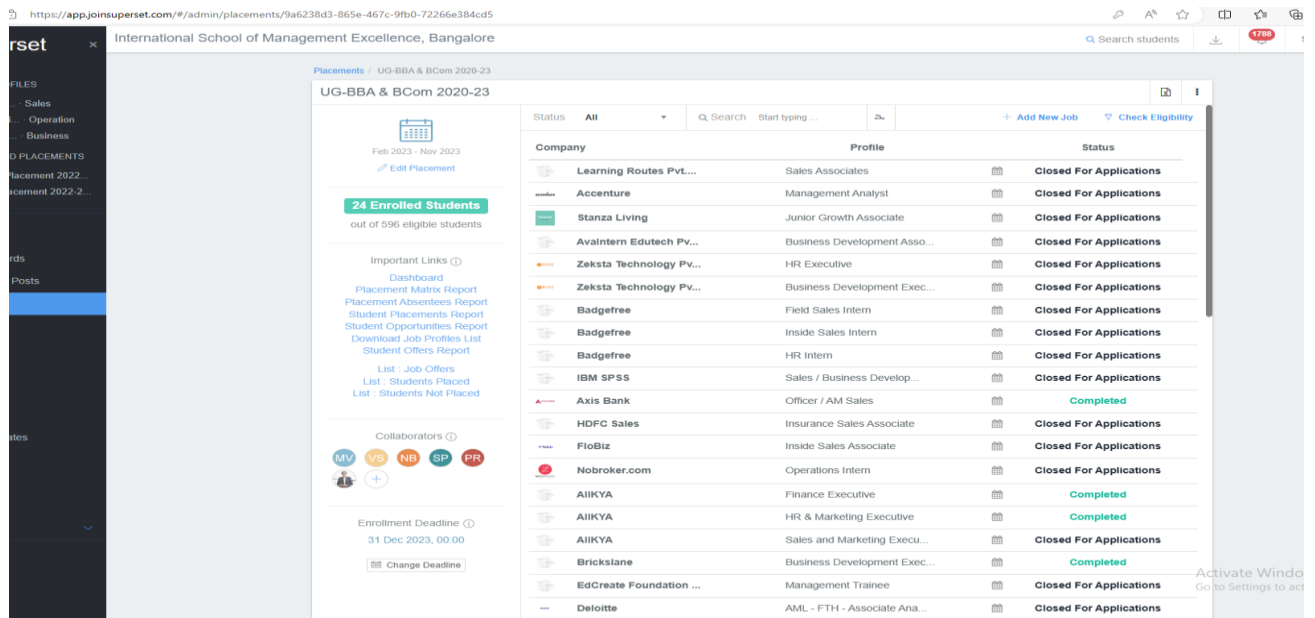

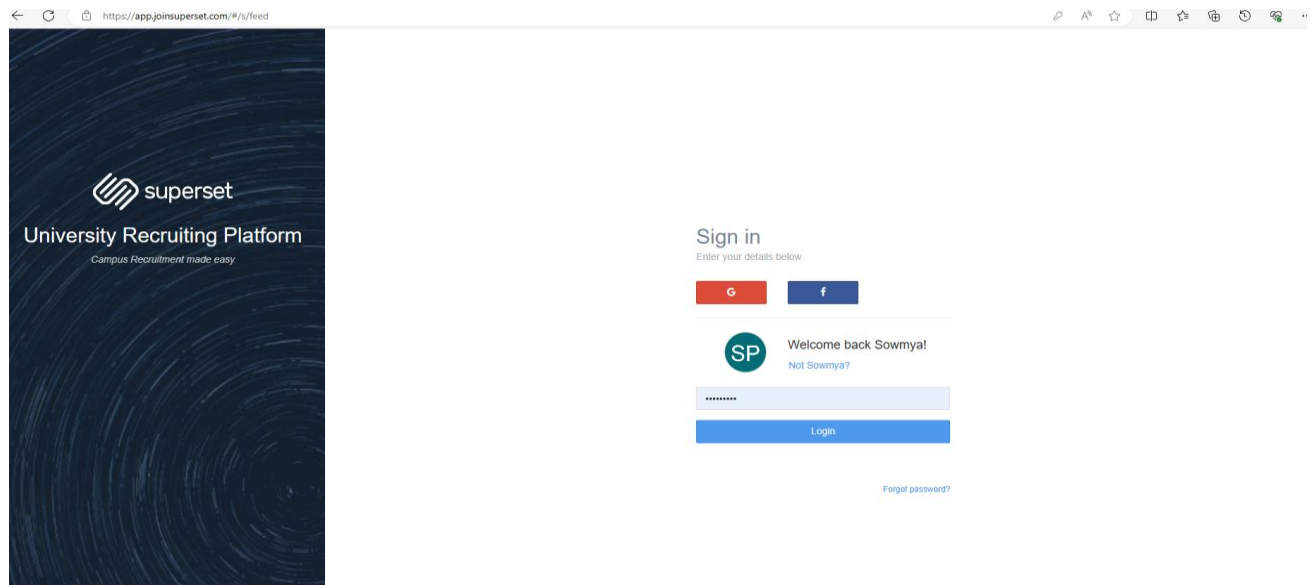

Answer:

The 6 stages in Data Processing are :

- Data Collection : Collecting data is the first step in data processing. Data is pulled from available sources(internal , external) , including data lakes and data warehouses
- Data Preparation : Data preparation, often referred to as 'pre-processing' is the stage at which raw data is cleaned up and organized for the following stage of data processing.
- Processing : During this stage, the data inputted to the computer in the previous stage is actually processed for interpretation. Processing is done using machine learning algorithms, though the process itself may vary slightly depending on the source of data being processed
- Data storage : After all of the data is processed, it is then stored for future use. While some information may be put to use immediately, much of it will serve a purpose later on. When data is properly stored, it can be quickly and easily accessed by members of the organization when needed.
- Data output/Interpretation/Analysis : The output/interpretation stage is the stage at which data is finally usable to non-data scientists. It is translated, readable, and often in the form of graphs, videos, images, plain text, etc.).
- Presentation : Representing the analyzed data in a comprehensible format, such as charts, graphs, reports or dashboards
